

One dollar a day could improve a person's life for a dignifying future?

Fomento is a mission of the Jesuits in Mexico. Fomento's special mission is to work through popular education and organization, so that every person can achieve a fulfilled human existence in accordance with their own culture.

To collaborate in helping some of the poorest and most troubled communities in Mexico, through education we cover the following programs:

- Health care
- Human rights
- Community organization
- Sustainable organic agriculture and reforestation
- Gender equality
- Rural communication through an indigenous radio station
- Protection of indigenous culture and identity

Would you like to join them in building a better future?

- With less than a dollar per day an indigenous mother can attend a workshop on child health.
- With less than a dollar per day indigenous patients can receive second level hospital attention, including transportation, housing and medicines.
- With 2 dollars per day a health promoter can attend on medical training that will benefit more than 50 families.
- With 6 dollars per day 35 indigenous peasants can participate in an organic agricultural workshop every month.
